HALL & HUEBEL

Example of Common Sense.
"Let there be no strife between me and thee, and between thy brethren and my brethren, for we are brethren. Is not the whole land before thee? Separate thyself, I pray thee, from me. If thou wilt take the left hand then I will go to the right; or if thou depart to the right hand then I will go to the left." An example of common sense to recommend to all unmixable neighbors, relatives and fellow citizens.

TO TAKE CHARGE OF BIG FACTORY

F. M. MARZLUFF LEAVES JANESVILLE AFTER TWENTY-TWO YEARS RESIDENCE.

TO REOPEN FACTORY HERE

Plans Under Way to Reorganize the Local Company and Continue Manufacture of Shoes.

After twenty-two years residence in Janesville, F. M. Marzluff will depart on Saturday for Cincinnati where he will assume charge of a large shoe manufacturing plant, becoming financially interested in the company as well. This is the result of an offer that came to Mr. Marzluff almost a year ago and which he has been considering for some months past. The company is one of the largest in the Ohio city and the position he accepts is one of considerable importance. The Marzluff company, in which he was interested here, and which he organized some twenty years ago has been shut down in its manufacturing department for several months but it is expected that the present company will be reorganized and the manufacture of shoes continued. It has held an enviable reputation as manufacturer of a fine line of grade of ladies' shoes and it is expected that this high grade will be continued to be manufactured. Several "cheap" grades will also be installed to meet the more popular demand.

The factory has employed in the neighborhood of a hundred expert hands and upon its reorganization it is expected that fully this number and perhaps more will find employment. It is said that an expert in manufacturing shoes is considering a large investment with the local company if the concern is reorganized as is now planned. The office of the Marzluff company is still open and the concern has not gone out of business so that the reorganization will be easily effected.

With Marzluff's retirement from active interest and removal from the city Janesville loses an earnest citizen who has always been interested in its welfare and growth. During his residence of nearly a quarter of a century he has been closely identified with its financial and business interests and according to his estimates his company has paid in salaries over a million and a quarter in salaries. The Marzluff company was entirely destroyed by fire several years ago but was reorganized almost immediately and but little time lost in the manufacturing out of it.

Mr. Marzluff's reputation as a shoe maker is well known as the best, to the shoe trade of the country, and his many friends in Janesville will watch with interest the success that is sure to attend him in his new position in Cincinnati.

Upon coming to this country she settled in Rock county where she has many friends. She was a faithful member of the M. E. church and was valued as a sympathetic and tender friend. The deceased was a sister-in-law of Mrs. Wm. Luck and cousin to John Plowright and Mrs. Charles Douglas of Janesville.

That Telephone Habit.

"The telephone habit has a strong grip on us," said a New York clergyman, as reported by the Sun, "and its influence on our vocabulary, our conversations and our lines of thought is quite remarkable. I had an amusing instance of just this very thing the other Sunday afternoon. I was going over with my children the various statements in the Lord's prayer. I tried to make each sentence plain and practical. When I'd finished my oldest boy asked, 'What's amen, father?' I hesitated to get some easy answer that they'd remember, when the youngest little chap spoke up and said, 'Why, amen's just "ring off," isn't it, father?' Then, as I supposed I looked somewhat amused and shocked at his interpretation of the word, he added: 'Amen's just more respectful "cause you're talking to God, but it really means ring off.' As an example of the ever present thought of the telephone I think this is hard to beat."

A Strict Dramatic Censor.

Vienna once possessed the strictest dramatic censor ever known in the person of Franz Hoegelin, who held that post in the Austrian capital at the beginning of the last century. Hoegelin published a manual for the guidance of censors. "A pair of lovers should never be allowed to appear on the stage alone. They must always be accompanied by a third person of mature years." Marriages out of one's class were also strictly forbidden by Hoegelin on the stage, and he quoted an instance of a play which he refused to pass because the author made the hero, Count Valdemar, marry a gardener's daughter. "Such misalliances have unfortunately been known to occur in real life, but that is no reason why they should be allowed on the stage," he said.

Precise.
A young Baltimore man has a habit of correcting carelessness in speech that comes to his notice. The other day he walked into a shop and asked for a comb. "Do you want a narrow comb or a wide comb?" asked the clerk. "No," said the customer, gravely. "I want a comb for a stout man with rubber teeth."

Roumanian Funeral Custom.
In Roumania a curious old funeral custom showed an amusing thoughtfulness for the very natural human vanity of the dead, two openings corresponding to ears being cut in the casket so that the corpse might have the pleasure of hearing the songs of mourning sung on either side of him as the coffin was borne to the grave.

Committee Thirteen of the County Board Had No Court Attendance Bill to Audit.

Through some misunderstanding when the county board meets to appropriate funds to pay the various bills against it at their annual meeting on November 15 there will be no accounting for service fees of the police officers of the city of Janesville in the local municipal court. In the past it has been customary for this report to be drawn up by the clerk of the municipal court but this year this has not been done. The report is really that of the chief of police of Janesville for fees due his officers for attendance upon the municipal court and the money is paid to him, and according to previous custom is paid over by him, to the city treasurer. The bill has always been presented to committee No. 13 of the county board ten days before meeting the bills against the county and then passed upon by the county board as a whole when the report is made. As this committee has held two sessions and no report has been filed the city will not receive its money until the February term. The report of the police officers is on file but there a different custom is in vogue, the head of the Beloit department retaining the fees and not turning them into the city funds. As the city pays one-third of the salary of the clerk of the local municipal court City Attorney Maxfield holds that it is part of his implied duties to draw up such bills although not specifically so designated in the act which created the court.

Was His Nest.

Little Frankie was once sent out to make a new nest for a hen. Some time after the nest had been completed he came in and said a hen was about to lay. On being asked if she was in the nest that he had made he said: "No! ma'am, I was on that one myself."

Of course he wouldn't, because the teeth fit him.

Associated Charities Caring for One Woman, a Widow, Who Needs Cook Stove Burning Coal.

But one case of destitution in the city that is really in need of help is a remarkable record for the city of Janesville at this time of the year. Yet that is the report the Associated Charities make of conditions among the poor of Janesville. The one case is of a widow who is in need of a cook stove that will burn coal and the Associated Charities are soliciting that as a donation from some kind-hearted person. Usually with the arrival of cold weather there are many families to be taken care of by the charitable organizations.

He has been offered a large sum for the odd specimen but refuses to part with it.

Moscow Bell Used as Chapel. Some of the bells that were cast in the golden age of bell founding are of gigantic size and worldwide renown. The largest in existence is the czar bell of Moscow, which weighs some 200 tons. Its height is 19 feet, its circumference 60 feet and the thickness of the metal used is two feet. It was never rung, as it cracked in the furnace, and is now used as a chapel, its broken side forming the doorway.

RAILROAD COMPANY NEATLY BAMBOOZLED

Into Giving "J. Long" Claiming to Hail From Janesville, Another Man's Suitcase.

The Chicago & Western Indiana Railroad Co. is very anxious to locate a man claiming to hail from this city and answering to the following description: 35 years of age; dark complexioned; full face and smooth shaven; 5 ft., 7 or 8 inches in height; wearing dark overcoat and black derby hat.

A letter written at the Chicago headquarters yesterday by J. J. Carroll, general baggage agent, tells of a new bogus person game with the railroad in the role of victim. Mr. Carroll says in part:

"On Nov. 7 a man giving his name as J. Long and address as Janesville, Wis., called at our baggage room at this station and informed the storage clerk that he had lost his duplicate check and wanted to identify a piece of baggage. On being admitted to our baggage room he walked back to where our hand baggage is kept and picked out a sole leather suitcase which had been checked from Albany, N. Y., to Chicago via the Delaware & Hudson and Erie railways under Delaware & Hudson special check No. 442,001.

"He was given a note to this office and one of our clerks went with him to the baggage room and asked him to give a list of contents, which he did, and on opening the suitcase it was found to contain all the articles named. Therefore our clerk made delivery of the baggage on a lost check receipt.

"A few minutes later a young man who gave his name as Thomas P. Hoban and his home address as No. 5 Richmond street, Clinton, Mass., called at our baggage room and presented the duplicate of Delaware & Hudson special check No. 442,001. He also gave an itemized list of the contents of the suit case, among which he named all the articles that had been mentioned by Long—the man to whom the baggage had been delivered.

"We at first thought that Hoban and Long were partners and possibly in collusion to defraud the railroad company, but a closer investigation leads us to believe that we have probably been victimized by the man, Long, who in some mysterious way obtained a knowledge of the contents of the suitcase.

"The local department is requested to keep a sharp lookout for a man answering the description. The name of no such man as 'J. Long' appears in the Janesville directory.

AGRICULTURAL SCHOOL MAY BE HELD IN BRODHEAD

University of Wisconsin Authorities
Are Planning to Conduct a One Week Session Here.

Brohead, Nov. 11.—Providing fifty or more will pledge themselves to attend and pay one dollar to defray expenses, the authorities of the University of Wisconsin will hold a one-week agricultural school in Brohead, under the direction of two experts. The subjects will probably be agriculture and hog raising. There is room in the high school building to hold this school and it seems a fine opportunity for the farmers who have not the time to go to Madison.

SAYS COOK GOT VIEWS 20 MILES FROM PEAK

Professor Parker, in Trip, Duplicates Doctor's Photos Far From Mount McKinley.

New York, Nov. 11.—Declaring that he has undoubted proof that Dr. Frederick A. Cook did not ascend to the summit of Mt. McKinley, Prof. Harschel C. Parker of Columbia university has just returned from Alaska.

Prof. Parker declares that his proofs, in the shape of photographs, show that Cook really did get within twenty miles, in an air line, of Mount McKinley, and further, that his investigations verify in every detail the charges made by Guide Edward Barrill, who according to Cook, accompanied him on the trip.

The most important part of Professor Parker's evidence, he says, is a duplicate photograph of the "Top of the Continent," which Cook used in his book and which shows Guide Barrill with a flag in hand on top of the mountain. Professor Parker says:

"Cook's Mount McKinley is a rock in Amphitheater glacier, 20 miles southeast of Mount McKinley, about 5,000 feet high, instead of 29,300 feet, which is the height of Mount McKinley."

Professor Parker was a member of the original Cook party that started for Mount McKinley in 1896. At that time Cook with Guide Barrill and Dr. Cook, started to investigate some glaciers. Later Cook sent Dr. Cook back and continued with Barrill and it was during these ramblings that Cook claimed to have climbed to the top of the mountain, as he claimed. Barrill's affidavit was doubted because he also claimed that Cook owed him money for services rendered.

HAT BILL REVOLUTION CAUSE.

300 Top Places Ordered by Amelle
Started Quarrel in Portugal.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 11.—Three hundred hats ordered by Dowager Queen Amelle, mother of King Manuel, which were brought from Paris at great expense, were the subject for the first quarrel between the royalists and Republicans in Portugal. For over a year the progressives in parliament refused to pay the bill, and from then on the breach widened until the revolution. This fact is vouched for by Francis P. Jaulus, a Detroit artist, who has been in Europe seven years. He also says wives of influential men were on the government pay rolls for positions they did not fill.

Southwestern Texas and Its Wonderful Possibilities. Thousands of people are flocking to the Cross "S" Ranch where things grow as by magic—Agricultural Perfection.

IN SUNNY SOUTHLAND

Leaving Montgomery in company with Mr. F. S. Dill, superintendent of Mr. J. C. Becker's novel works, the editor of this journal went to Texas on a tour of investigation and information. At Williamsport Mr. Spangler, manager of the Williamsport Hotel, boarded the train, and was a traveling companion as far as Pittsburg; he went to Cleveland, O. Arriving at St. Louis, Mo., on Tuesday evening we were met at the Union Station by a representative of the proprietors of Cross "S" Ranch and escorted to a special train in waiting. The train was made up of observation, dining and sleeping cars, with enough coaches provided so that all had plenty of room, and each person was as comfortable as in a hotel. We found that our train was only one of five other sections made up similar to ours, and containing northern people pouring into the artesian belt of Texas.

But a few hours sufficed to become acquainted with those in our coach, and before the end of the thousand-mile journey of our special, we were on speaking terms with all on the train. We were surprised to find not only other people from our own state, but people from New York, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan, Iowa, Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma, all bound for Cross "S" Ranch. Several families were aboard, the heads of the family having made previous trips, purchased land, and were now returning with their families, to make their home in Texas.

Iron Mountain Railroad and passed over the Intermediate and Great Northern and Southern Pacific and the DeWitt and Crystal City R. R. We passed through Little Rock, Ark., Texarkana, Austin, San Antonio, Tex., arriving at Uvalde, the junction of the Southern Pacific and the U. & G. C. R. R., at ten o'clock on Thursday morning. Here we were detained about three hours on account of repairs being made to the locomotive, finally arriving at our destination, Thursday afternoon.

We were taken to the East End Hotel, a large, roomy building owned by the owners of Cross "S" and flanked on either side by other buildings, one of which was the office building. After removing the dust of travel, we were escorted out to see one of the artesian wells on the experimental farm near the hotel, and to view the fields of vegetables, corn, cotton, sugar cane and many other varieties of vegetation growing on the land. A detailed description of these plants and the manner of farming the wonderful fertility of the soil, and the crops raised will be given in future letters to be published in the "Mirror."

Our first view of an artesian well was of an eight-inch iron pipe projecting from the ground a distance of four or five feet into the air. Near the top was a wheel similar to a brake wheel on a freight car. One of our party who had been on the ranch before turned the wheel a few times, opening a valve, and immediately a solid column of water shot into the air from the pipe. To one who had never seen it before, it was a sight well worth seeing. The water is warm, and at this place comes from a depth of 800 feet. The water is soft and pure; everybody drinks it, and has been drinking it, there being no alcohol or other matter in it to injure man, beast or vegetation.

We learned there are already three hundred flowing wells within three miles of this ranch. They range from 100 to 1,000 gallons per minute, and are of varying quality. At San Antonio wells have been supplying the city of 150, 000 people with water for the past 28 years, without injury to soil or life, driven by an insistent natural pressure which causes it to flow abundantly. Authorities from the state department of Texas, after an exhaustive study of these wells, found they were caused by water having its source in the Rocky Mountains, and flowing into the Gulf of Mexico, across the continent. It is their opinion that the flow will always continue. The water being warm is of much benefit to winter crops; they grow faster when watered with artesian water than when irrigated from running streams. It would be difficult to estimate the true value of these wells. When completed an artesian well works without cost. These wells are the opinion that the artesian well will cause this part of Texas to become a veritable paradise within a very short time. The experimental stage has been passed. Crops are now growing and have been marketed that make our average yield per acre in Pennsylvania look like child's play. Irrigated farming is a business certainty, free from droughts, floods and hard luck stories. When your crop needs water you simply make it rain, there is no guess work about it.

All temperate and semi-tropical fruits thrive, oranges, figs, dates and peaches are fortune builders. The soil is there, the climate, the water, and transportation facilities—unexcelled. The climate here is the same as at San Antonio, one of the celebrated health resorts of the world. The sunsets here are celebrated all over the world, and we were treated to a magnificent spectacle on our first evening. Long trailing streamers of color and light, marked out one-half the western sky in different colors, shading gently from purple to orange and from orange to blue. The sun went down in a blaze of brilliance. The very last bit of the big red disc faded, seemed mobile with color and left an afterglow which is found nowhere else out of the tropics. The clear dry air is largely accountable for the beauty of a southwest Texas sunset. Words are inadequate to describe the charm and grandeur which must be seen to be appreciated.

Two railroads already enter the ranch, and a third is in prospect. The season is six weeks earlier and 1,000 miles nearer the great markets than California. One pleasant feature of our trip is the fact that we found things exactly as represented to us before leaving home, and in many cases we found many statesmen very conservative, many good features not being mentioned. We can readily understand why the owners of the ranch prefer to have people make a personal investigation before purchasing land. Practical farmers in our party from some of the rich agricultural states conceded it was the finest body of rich land they ever saw. Where irrigation has been conducted during the last two years the most luxuriant growths of gardens and orchards are to be seen. We talked with the men who raised the crops. They are contented and happy, and are making money. They say they have no snow to shovel and no coal to buy. They enjoy good health, are independent in every sense of the word, have full and plenty, and a few acres of irrigated Texas land is a gold mine. They welcome good people who are intelligent and not afraid to work. They say there is no room for the sluggish there at present, and indeed, we found none there.

Messrs. Buckingham and Gross placed one of their autos at our disposal and instructed the chauffeur to take us wherever we wanted to go, and get our information first hand. We visited many people in ranch and their stories without any exception confirmed everything told us about what at first appeared like fairy tales. We found Messrs. Buckingham and Gross spoken of by all in the highest possible terms. They are gentlemen whose word is as good as their bond in every particular. They treat all alike and assist people in every possible way. They have reserved 10,000 acres of the land for their own use and as a consequence they are interested in having good neighbors on the adjoining properties, and people who are satisfied and contented.

After spending our first night on the famous Cross "S" Ranch, we were taken to Crystal City next morning. It is nothing short of a phenomenon. Two years ago there was not even a wagon road there; nothing, but brush, mosquitoes and cattle. Now it is a bustling town containing as many people as Montgomery. Already they have about fifteen stores, grocery, clothing, hardware, drug store, two newspapers, a bank, a telephone exchange, electric lights, artificial ice plant, telegraph office, water works, lumber yard, cotton gins, churches, and the office and round house of the Crystal City and Uvalde Railroad. It is about the center of the ranch and is reached by the best roads it has ever been our pleasure to ride over from every portion of the ranch. Going in over the ranch roads on which there had been no grading, as none was necessary, the speedometer on the automobile indicated a speed of fifty miles an hour at times.

An artesian well supplies the people with water; it flows about two million gallons per day. We were told by a barber who had a shop near the well, that when they turned the water into a big tank in the rear of the well the pressure was so great it lifted the roof of the tank. The roof was about twenty feet from the ground. Being in the center of the artesian belt, its future seemed assured. The buildings are substantial frame structures; the dwellings finished in about the same modern styles as those in Montgomery. Nature provides this for the people of Crystal City, and furnaces, heating stoves and hot plants are not necessary here. The town was laid out by a competent engineer, and as a consequence the streets are wide and straight. The main street is wider than Pennsylvania Avenue in Washington and the alleys are as wide as

Main street here.

The owners of the ranch were liberal with their land, and the inhabitants of Crystal City will reap the benefit of their generosity. We found most things about the same price as in Montgomery, with a few minor exceptions. The business men and merchants are energetic, hustlers, being mostly northern people who have moved since the artesian water was found. They are raising funds for a $50,000 school building. Texas is said to have the best school laws in the Union. The state furnishes all land free for educational purposes.

After spending some time in Crystal City we went to the Bryant farm. This is one of the first irrigated places on the ranch, and consequently should be a good criterion to judge from. Mr. Bryant and his family moved from the plains in the north part of Texas, which is nearly as far north as Virginia. He never had any experience with irrigated land before moving to Cross "S". He has harvested two crops, most of which were experimental, and the two crops averaged him $850 per acre. On some acres his profits were over $1,000, but on others the yield was not so great. This was not because the land was any better or place than another, but because he did not know what the ground would produce in the winter abundance until he experimented with it, and he planted figs, alfalfa and other crops which will not mature for some time.

He has a beautiful home surrounded by tropical plants, orange trees, banana trees, lemons, figs, etc. He had been raising in north Texas, but he said the longer he farmed it seemed the poorer he got. He said the world looked different to him now. When he planted his seed his crop was assured. There was no uncertainty about it and the yield was more than double for the same amount of labor he expended where he came from.

At the third farm adjoining we found practically the same condition. The birds have gone in for stock raising also and have a large number of young calves, milk calves, goats, horses, cows, etc. They have prospered wonderfully, own a hand-made automobile in which they ride like city folks, and have a large number of Mexicans working for them. They are delighted with the country and the climate, and said the man who could not make money on the land in that country could not make any anywhere. They are growing alfalfa, which yields from seven to nine cuttings per year. Their opinion is that nowhere else is so much alfalfa raised. Properly directed endeavor has enabled them to make more on five acres truck land on Cross "S" Ranch than they did on the 160-acre farm in Missouri where they moved from. It is not necessary to be an expert to succeed; all that is required is good judgment, and an exercise of good sense. The Bermuda onion is one of the best paying crops and is being made profitable on irrigated land. The seed is sown between the first and fifteenth of September. The sets are then transplanted in December, and the crop is harvested late in March.

Cabbage and lettuce grow luxuriantly through the winter season, many heads of cabbage weighing from 15 to 20 pounds. Cauliflower and cauliflower grow like native products. Heads of cauliflower weighing nine pounds have been grown here. Celery and asparagus are grown profusely.

Mr. Bryant's last crop of sugar cane matured just free for a field average. It made over 700 gallons of syrup per acre, and sold for fifty cents per gallon, wholesale. Cotton makes a bale to the acre, while by dry farming half a bale is considered good. Broom corn, oats, sugar beets, sorghum, peanuts, cow pea nuts, cow peas, chinas, cactus, pumpkins, watermelons, Kaffir corn, geranium millet and rapid producers beyond belief.

Fruit, such as dates, figs, oranges, peaches, peaches, apricots, and other fruits yield in abundance. "Sweet" water is located in Spanish for pecan. This is the river about which the dispute arose years ago with Mexico. Mexico insisted that this was the river intended for the boundary between Mexico and the United States while the United States contended it was the Rio Grande. It was finally decided in favor of the United States. Persimmons and pecans grow wild like chestnuts here. The culture is a most profitable business. Many apples are on the ranch, and Uvalde, just north of the ranch, is the greatest honey center in that part of the state, many carloads being shipped out monthly. The great advantage of the irrigated land in this section is that profitable crops are raised in the winter, then a spring crop and a fall crop, based on the land the same year.

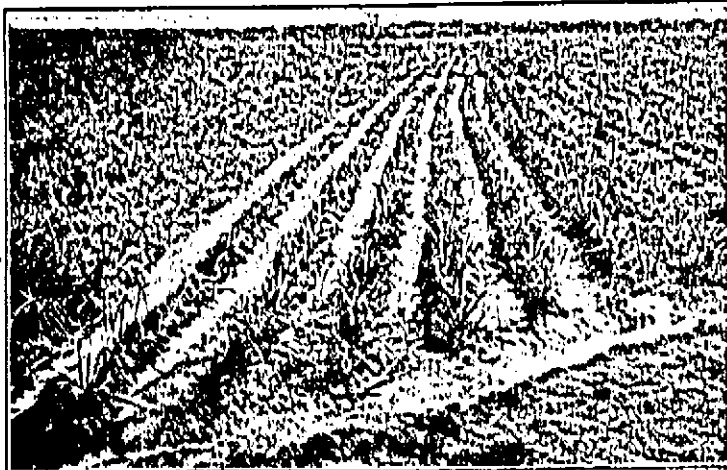

They are raising more vegetables than California, better fruit than Florida and more corn on an average per acre than Kansas, and never have we seen such luxuriant growth anywhere. Home life here is certainly a continuous round of pleasure in the almost everlasting springtime, where vegetables are green in the gardens, and fruit is ripe in the orchard through the year. The cost of clearing the land is hardly worth considering. Three Mexicans at $1 per day each will average an acre a day, and the mesquite trees make excellent fence posts and firewood.

The Mexicans are a polite, cheerful people, and make good field hands. Southwest Texas is fast becoming known as a farming paradise. Among the splendid conditions that make life worth living may be mentioned an exceptionally healthy climate, mild winter, pure water and plenty of it, an ample supply of wood, the best roads we have ever seen, adequate railway transportation facilities, easy access to schools and congenial society. An examination of the land chart in the Cross "S" Ranch office shows that more than one thousand farms have already been purchased, and the time is not far distant when not a foot of the land will be for sale.

The one great factor that impressed us is the wonderful climate. The air is fine, full of ozone and bracing. A delightful breeze is always blowing in from the Gulf, and it is just far enough away to have all the dampness taken out before it reaches Cross "S". Although but a few days on the ranch, we could realize the bracing effects of the dry air. The average annual temperature is about sixty-eight. There is only one advice to be given: Go and see it. Seeing is believing. With farms that are fertile, no wood or water problem to contend with, a wide range of crops possible, a climate unsurpassed artesian resources and an era of rapid development, what more could one ask?

It costs but half as much to live here, heavy clothing and woollens are unnecessary. The tide of travel has certainly turned Texasward. People are seeking new and better homes; they are becoming tired of toiling on barren, unproductive soil, where it is necessary to put back on the land in fertilizers about as much as they get off. The proposition appealed to us strongly that if there is a place on earth where health, prosperity and happiness may be had, it is here.

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON.

I N a cemetery through which I had occasion to pass the other day, I saw, standing out unique among the conventionally mournful shafts of marble and granite, a huge grey boulder, primeval and unbroken.

I inquired about its presence there and was told this: The young man, whose grave it marked, was passionately fond of a certain rugged spot on the coast where he spent his summers. This boulder had marked a prominence where he used to sit and watch the ocean at sunset, and when he died a few months after his marriage, just as he was about to fulfill his dream of bringing his bride to the spot he had so often described to her, she chose to bring that boulder, rather than some conventionally expensive shaft of granite or marble, to mark his grave.

Don't you think that was a beautiful thought?

It seemed so to me.

I know another case where a man who believed in cremation left instructions that his ashes should be carried out to the farm which was his boyhood home, and scattered in springtime over the ploughed fields.

"And just recently I heard of a woman who requested that she be cremated and her ashes carried out 'as close to the horizon as you can get,' and given to rest in the heart of the sea she had loved so intensely all her life.

As it happened, those whom she left behind greatly objected to cremation, and after consulting a lawyer and making sure that their act would not invalidate her will, they calmly refused her last request. She lies today in the center of a crowded cemetery two hundred miles from her beloved ocean, respectfully interred under the most conventional of marble shafts upon which is fulsomely chiseled her family's respect and grief for the woman whose last request they saw fit to deny.

You think this is a decidedly mournful tale? You don't like to be reminded about things like that? You make me think of Palsia's famous land-lady. Remember how "I cried out God, God, three or four times; now I, to comfort him, bid him 'I should not think of God; I hoped there was no need to trouble himself with any such thought yet."

But truly I didn't mean it to be lugubrious. I just wanted to tell you of some people I admired for being able to rob death of a little of its horribly conventional ceremony.

Fads and Fashions.

New York, Nov. 10.—Velvet and fur or velvet and lace, two truly royal combinations, seem to be the keynote of fashion at this season, not only in Paris but also in New York. Every kind of fur, from the cheapest to the most expensive is used in the costumes of fashionable women at present and there is every reason to believe that the coming winter season will bring out a larger number and variety of fur garments of every description than have been seen in many years.

Long coats of fur promise to be extremely popular this winter, although there will also be three-quarter length and even shorter coats. A majority of yard wide are not unusual and these coats, whether long or short, have collars of long hair fur and the collars, both in the long-hair fur and in the short fine fur, are usually huge, extending far out on the shoulders and crossing in front, to fasten at the waist line or below, well to the left side. Often, too, this big collar falls in the big square collar lines in the back, and it may even pass all collar lines and drop to the waist line, or, like a big, broad, square-cornered panel, to a point below the hips.

Combinations of fur are many in long coats, short coats and small furs, the last a decided misnomer, for the neck pieces and muffs are in most cases anything but small. Scarfs three-quarters of a yard or even a yard wide are not unusual and these coats, whether long or short, have collars of long hair fur and the fall almost to the floor or at least to the knees in front or to be worn crossed on the shoulder with one end falling down the back. These ample scarfs, if they are to be worn gracefully, must be of extreme suppleness and one of the fine short furs is generally used for the body of the scarf, while either a long hair or short hair, contrasting fur may form a border.

These white ermine with a border of blue, silky black ermine, makes a charming combination, and ermine, bordered by skunk or other long, dark fur is also considerably used. Mole skin, which has sprung into new popularity, a popularity well deserved because of this fur's softness, silkiness and exquisite brown gray tone, is combined with ermine and with the dark fur and seal is used with almost everything.

The huge scarfs are made up even in the thicker furs, such as sable, the martens, opossum, etc., but in such cases the one fur is most often used with no combination or border effect and these one-fur scarfs are much used even in the short hair furs, such as seal, ermine and chinchilla. They have, in the opinion of the fastidious, a more elegant air than the combinations of furs and they are, undoubtedly, more practical, being less cut up, more easily remodeled and less spectacular; but these combination arrangements are very modish this season and there are always many women who do not look further than that.

All the notable designers of fashion in Paris have introduced Venice lace on their models, probably because it is the most becoming lace to be used with velvet. Venetian lace collars edged with fur are worn on velvet evening coats by some of the most fashionable women.

Brocade, crepe, satin and velvet are all popular this winter, and many of the designs as well as the quality are quite unlike anything that has ever been seen, and make superb gowns, but almost without exception these are expensive. For the less expensive gown the satin foundation, with a pattern robe, can be selected by the woman who is counting her pennies. Where expense does not enter into the question, there can be the most gorgeous gowns turned out—the foundation of satin or brocade with tulle embroidered in jet or crystal or colored beads and finished with a deep fringe of silk or beads. Fringe is, extremely fashionable and is used in all widths, several rows of narrow or medium width, or one row of wide, as is the more becoming or the more, in keeping with the lines of the gown.

The most elaborate trimming and embroidery are used almost casually without regard to cost. Bands of pascamenterie are extremely effective, less expensive than the embroidery upon the material itself, and there is an apparently endless choice in color and design. These bands trim the waist, finish the tunic and the sleeves, and the width depends on whether the narrow or wide line is the best.

Band embroidery, especially in white porcelain, is used on the velvet gowns as a decorative note. Many of the most chic gowns display this novel trimming. Broad black silk galon, arranged as long straight bands on blue mousseline de sole, was seen on an exceedingly handsome gown.

Embroidered bands on brocade are thought by some women to be inappropriate, and they contend that when the material is of a flowered or figured design in plain satin or velvet is better, being more of a contrast, but this winter many of the embroideries resemble so closely the pattern and color of the brocades that they seem only to enhance its beauty. A band of embroidery around the hem on the waist and in a diagonal line across the front of the skirt is a popular method of trimming and when, as is so often seen, the skirt is cut to open on the side, showing an underskirt of another material, this embroidery finishing the upper skirt adds greatly to its beauty.

Often the design of the brocade is worked out in embroidery or heavy silk or of crystal beads, and this is most effective, for it does not break into the design as do the bands of embroidered pascamenterie. All these small, or apparently small, details count for so much in the finish of the modern evening gown that it is worth while studying them carefully.

One of the pretty novelties, which promises to become very popular this winter is the high Japanese wash of satin, with its broad bow at the back and no ends. This style with the waistless corset is sure to meet with general approval.

The colour cutting hats have sprung into favor recently. They combine the softness of the popular plush beaver with a smoothness of felt and are made into very attractive shapes. They may be obtained in almost any color.

Mother-of-Pearl cut in odd shapes is most effective when wrought into the handwork on a gown. It takes the place of the colored jewels so much seen last season and gives a much more subdued effect.

With rules for mourning becoming less strict each year, it is not surprising that this year practically all the prevailing shades and fancies of colored dresses are repeated in mourning fabrics.

The high black boots with the lattice-work design extending from the low vamp to the top and heavily beaded in jet, are among the most effective models of shoes for dress occasions. All street skirts are short—about three inches from the ground. Much gold and silver lace appears on stockings.

Fall Pickles.
To make sweet pickles from cucumbers, peel, cut into slices of one inch. To each seven pounds of the cucumbers and four pounds of sugar, a pint of cider vinegar, 12 whole cloves, a quarter of an ounce of stick cinnamon and two blades of mace. Put the sugar, spices and vinegar into a porcelain lined kettle, bring to the boiling point, add the cucumbers and cover and cook slowly until well cooked but not soft. Put away until the next morning, and then boil up again. Repeat for another morning, then pile the cucumbers in the jars carefully, and pour over them the hot liquor. Seal and put in a dark, cool, dry place.

Safety Soup.
Cook the root with codfish until tender, put through a sieve or ricer and to the pulp add the seasonings and bind with a tablespoonful of flour and butter. A cup of cream to three cups of milk makes a rich soup.

Ironing Hints.
If a table cloth is very large, it is better for two people to iron on it, as it dries out too fast.

Ironing must be done with good tools and good light to be satisfactory. Have everything at hand before beginning. Lifting the iron as little as possible and pressing well.

To get a good gloss on table linen, the hotter and heavier the iron the better. Many fine laundresses who are employed to iron heavy linen, run it through boiling water, wringing through the wringer, then iron immediately with hot irons. The linen is beautifully ironed and has all the stiffness required to keep it fresh looking.

Colored clothes should not be starched, as it fades delicate colors. Iron, when possible, on the wrong side, not using too hot an iron. Table linen, if starched a little, will keep clean longer and the stains and spots are easily removed, as the starch prevents them from taking such hold of the fabric. Starched linen wears out more rapidly than unstarched, as the threads crack in the folds.

But find out for yourself the truth of our claims for it. Take a box of our shells with you the next time you go after game and you'll be convinced that Robin Hood Ammunition kills further—gets there quicker—hits harder and "kicks" less than any other ammunition.

Our Powders, burning gradually, drive the shot with ever-increasing force from breech to muzzle. Full force of the charge comes only when the powder is wholly consumed—at the very muzzle. Results: greatest possible muzzle velocity and penetration, yet much less kick than you find in other powders. Our Powders do not crush or disfigure the shot as other powders will do, and this means that Robin Hood Ammunition shoots straight—it shoots where you point the gun.

Our four brands of powder are:

"Kelllogg laughed with delight. 'Nat,' he cried, 'my poor crazy friend, listen to me. This working and church-going and helping old Graham is all very noble and fine, and I'm glad you've done it. This drug store is a monument to the business ability that I always knew was latent in you. And clean living hasn't done you any harm. But now you're due to come down to earth. This place pays you a neat profit. Well and good. That's all I'll ever do. It's new to you now, and you like the novelty, and you're having the time of your life finding out you're good for something. But pretty soon it'll begin to state on you, and before long you'll find yourself hating it and the town, and then you'll be back where you started. Now, I'm going to hold you to our bargain for your own sake. on and do what you like with. Don't let this chance slip—put on your life!"

"But," Nat argued feebly, "think of the injustice to the girl. From the way I've behaved since I struck this burg she thinks I'm closely related to the saloons."

"Very well, then; I'll concede a point. If you really think you're taking a mean advantage of her, when she proposes to you tell her all about yourself—just the sort of chap you've been. You needn't mention our agreement, however. Then if she wants to drop you I'll have nothing to say."

"Thank you for nothing," said Dun can bitterly. "A bargain's a bargain. I gave you my word of honor I'd go through with this thing, and I'll stick to it. But I tell you I don't like it."

"Oh, I know how you feel, Nat. But I know that some day you'll come to me and say, 'Harry, if you had let me back out I'd never have forgiven you.'"

"All right," said Nat impatiently. "I presume you know best."

CHAPTER XIX.

A CUSTOMER came and went after Kelllogg had gone up stairs to meet Sam Graham, and then Nat noticed that twilight was beginning to darken the store.

Tracy returned to look after the store during the supper hour, but was delighted to hear that he need not remain, but could go back to his beloved Angle.

Now Nat moved to the windows and switched on the bulbs behind the huge glass jars filled with tinted water. Returning, he was about to connect up the remainder of the illuminating system when Josie, entering, stayed him. Later he was glad of this.

"Nat," he knew that voice. "Why, Josie?"

he exclaimed in surprise, swinging about to discover her standing on the threshold, very dainty and fetching—

"HARRY WAS DELIGHTED."

Indeed, in one of the summery frocks she had brought back from New York. She moved over to him, holding out her hand. He took it with disguised reluctance.

"I'm so glad," she sighed. "I wanted to see you—to talk to you alone." He bit his lip in his annoyance, shivering with presentiment. "What about, Josie?"

"About Wednesday night, after prayer-meeting. Why didn't you wait for me?"

"Why—ah—I had to get back to the store, you know. There were some checks to be made out and sent off, and I'd forgotten them. Besides," he added on inspiration, "you were talking with Roland, and I didn't want to interrupt you."

"So you left me to go home with him?"

"Why, what else?"

"You're making me awful unhappy." Her voice trembled. "You knew I didn't want to walk home with Roland."

"How could I know that?"

"I should think you ought to know it, Nat, unless you're blind. Besides, I told you once."

"True," he fenced desperately, "but that was a long time ago, and how could I be sure you hadn't changed your mind? Besides, you know, I wasn't monopolizing you, if I do—"

"Why, if I do—ah—"

"If you're afraid people will talk about us, seeing us so much together, you needn't worry. They're doing that now."

"Why, Josie?"

"Yes, they are. We've been going together so long. And even now you don't seem glad to see me."

"You should know I am."

"You don't act like it."

"It's so unexpected," he muttered wretchedly.

"You didn't really think I wanted Roland Barnett to go home with me Wednesday night, did you, Nat?"

"It seemed so, but that's all right. Why shouldn't you?"

She turned to him, trembling a little. "Must I tell you, Nat?"

"Oh, no," he cried in dismay. "Please don't!"

"I see I must," she persisted. "You're so blind. It—"

DOCTOR ADVISED OPERATION

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Galena, Kans.—"A year ago last March I fell and a few days later there was serious inflammation in my right side. In a short time a lump came and it bothered me so much at night I could not sleep. It kept growing larger and by fall it was as large as a hen's egg. I could not go to bed without a hot water bottle applied to that side. I had one of the best doctors in Kansas and he told my husband that I would have to be operated on as it was something like a tumor caused by a rupture. I wrote to you for advice and you told me not to get discouraged but to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did take it and soon the lump in my side broke and passed away."—Mrs. I. R. HUNT, 713 Mineral Ave., Galena, Kans.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has proved to be the most successful remedy for curing the worst forms of female ills, including displacements, inflammation, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, and nervous prostration. It costs but a trifle to try it, and the result has been worth millions to many suffering women.

If you want special advice write for it to Mrs. E. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass. It is free and always helpful.

THE INTERPRETATION was so imperative that she was pleased. "Why, what, Nat?" she asked, rising.

"The time has come," he declared. "You must know the truth."

"Oh, Nat!"

"I'm not what you think me," he continued dramatically.

"Oh, Nat!"

"Josie, don't say anything you'll be sorry for," he entreated wildly.

"I can't help it; I've got to. It was—it was because I wanted to be with you. There!" she gasped, frightened by her own forwardness. "Now I've said it!"

Duncan grasped frantically at straws. "But you don't really mean it, Josie. You know you don't," he floundered. "You're just saying that because you have such a kind heart and—ah—don't want to hurt me—ah—because—"

"Nat," she said gently, looking up into his face, "would it make you happy to know I really meant it?"

"Why—ah—why shouldn't it, Josie?"

"Then please believe me when I say it."

"But I do believe it. I— He stammered and fell still.

"Because I do like you, Nat, very much, and—and it's very hard for me to know that folks think I'm pursuing you and that you're trying to avoid me."

"Josie," he exclaimed reproachfully. "Well, that's the way it looks," she admitted plaintively. "You don't want it, do you?"

"Why, not of course I don't."

"Then why don't you stop it?" She watched his face, her manner coy and yielding. "Nat," she said in a softer voice, "if you like me as well as I like you—"

He moved away a pace or two. "Ah, child," he said, with a feeling that the term was not misplaced somehow, "you don't know what you're saying!"

"Yes, I do," she pointed. "I don't believe you care anything about me."

"Oh, Josie, please!"

"Well, anyway you've never told me so."

She turned an indignant shoulder to him.

"How could I?"

"But don't you see that I shouldn't, Josie?" He turned back to her side, looked down at her, pleaded his defense with the fire of desperation. "Just think, you are an only daughter—just what this had to do with the case was not plain even to him—"

"an only daughter," he repeated—"ah, not only your father's only daughter, but your mother's only daughter. Your father—ah—is my friend. How unfair it would be to him to—"

But the girl interrupted with decision. "But papa wants you to. He told me so."

He could only pretend not to understand. "But consider, Josie. You are rich, an heiress. I'm a poor man. Would you like it to be said I was after your money?"

"No one would dare say such a thing," she asserted, with profound conviction.

"Oh, yes, they would! You don't know the world as I do. And for all you know they might be right. How do you know that?"

"Nat!" A catch in her voice stopped him. "Don't say such horrid things! I could tell a woman always can. I know you would be incapable of such a thing. Papa knows it too. No one has ever got ahead of papa, and he says you are a fine, steady, Christian man and he would rather see me your wife than any—"

"Josie!"

The interjection was so imperative that she was pleased. "Why, what, Nat?" she asked, rising.

"The time has come," he declared. "You must know the truth."

"Oh, Nat!"

"I'm not what you think me," he continued dramatically.

"Oh, Nat!"
